JAPAN DOES NOT LIKE TREATY

Ambassador Inouye Here On Way To Argentine

"The present treaty between the Japanese and United States governments is one-sided. We, the Japanese, do not get as much privileges as the United States citizens. We would like to have the new treaty framed in such a way as to give us equal rights and privileges."

His Imperial Japanese Majesty's Special Ambassador K. Inouye, who arrived in the Hongkong Maru this morning, made the above statement when interviewed on board the liner by a Bulletin representative. He was willing to answer all the questions propounded at him.

The ambassador, in the course of his interview, stated that the Imperial Japanese Government was preparing a new treaty, which, if agreeable to the United States Government, would be most acceptable to the Japanese subjects.

"The present treaty, which, according to our government, will terminate next July," said the ambassador, "is not quite fair. It is more to the interests of the Americans than the Japanese."

When asked to explain, he said: "I mean by it that the Japanese shipping interests are not treated as fairly as those of the American ships. The American ships can do business, such as carrying passengers and freight between two Japanese ports, while the Japanese liners are prevented from enjoying the same privilege."

"This is not fair, and it is detrimental to our shipping interests. When the present treaty expires next July, we shall endeavor to have the United States Government recognize our commercial and shipping interests, so that the two governments would be mutually benefited by it."

"The tariff interests are other matters which are vitally important. They should be adjusted in such a way as to be commercially beneficial to both countries. The United States Government claims that the present treaty will expire in two years from July next, while the Japanese Government thinks it will terminate and expire next July. This is quite a difference and it is being interpreted diplomatically now by the representatives of the two governments of the United States and Japan."

"In settling this important question, our diplomats are considering the matter carefully and amicably. It is our desire to settle the differences as quietly and agreeably as possible. We realize that the United States Government has done much towards our commercial progress."

Commissioner Moir Would Inaugurate New System

(Special Correspondence)
HILO, July 22. — School Commissioner John T. Moir is of the opinion that while the new system of school supervision inaugurated at the recent meeting of the Board of Commissioners, will result in the advancement of the public schools in the islands, that it should be carried still further and be supplemented with a system of examinations, one the results of which the pay of the principals of the various schools might be based. The principal of a school making a good showing would thus be paid more than the head of a school where the scholars showed up poorly, and in this manner the pedagogues would have every incentive to do their very best, while the scholars would reap the benefit.

"I think that the system of supervising principals which we started is a step in the right direction," said Mr. Moir last week. "However, I think that we might go still further by means of a system of examinations. Where I was brought up the school inspector came around once or twice a year, and he gave each pupil a set of questions to answer. These cards he took with him, and when they had been corrected and the percentages had been worked out, the cards gave a pretty good showing in black and white of the standing of the school, and while the assistant teachers were paid fixed salaries, the salaries of the principals were based on the showing made at these examinations."

"At the meeting of the commissioners I spoke in favor of this plan, and I hope that some day some such method may be adopted here. Heretofore the system of reports on the schools has been a rather haphazard one, and one really did not know much more after getting the report on a school than one did before seeing it."

tion of Japanese into these islands?" he was asked.

"Well," said the ambassador, "the Japanese Government is more inclined to send her subjects to Manchuria than to any other country."

"There are more lands to be developed there and in all the surrounding regions which will be of more interest to Japan than in the United States or any other lands. The immigrants will be sent there more abundantly than to any other part of the world. There is plenty to do there that will keep the Japanese busy for some time to come."

Ambassador Inouye is one of the shrewdest diplomats in the Imperial diplomatic service. He served his government ably as ambassador in Berlin, Germany, and other countries. He was educated in the London University about thirty years ago, attending for about ten years.

Having special confidence in him, the Emperor of Japan commissioned him a special ambassador to be present at the celebration of the independence of the Argentine Republic, which takes place September 16.

The ambassador is accompanied by Captain K. Moriyama and Colonel I. Watanabe, respectively navy and army attaches. Included in his party, aside from the attaches, are Baron S. Ozaki, Secretary K. Tanabe, T. Aoki, T. Soeda and K. Sasaki.

Inouye said that the Japanese training squadron will probably arrive in December, bearing the naval cadets who graduated from the naval college. The ships will be in command of Admiral Yashiro, who was naval attaché under him while he (Inouye) was Japanese ambassador in Berlin.

The ambassador was met off port by Consul-General Uyeno and Secretaries Suigimoto and Ito of the consulate. Mr. Akai, manager of the local branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank, also went out in the launch. Secretary Suigimoto of the consulate served under Ambassador Inouye in the Foreign Office.

When the ambassadorial party came ashore they were immediately conveyed around town to see points of interest. They will leave this evening at 6 o'clock.
